UNDERWOOD SEES PARTY'S FAILURE

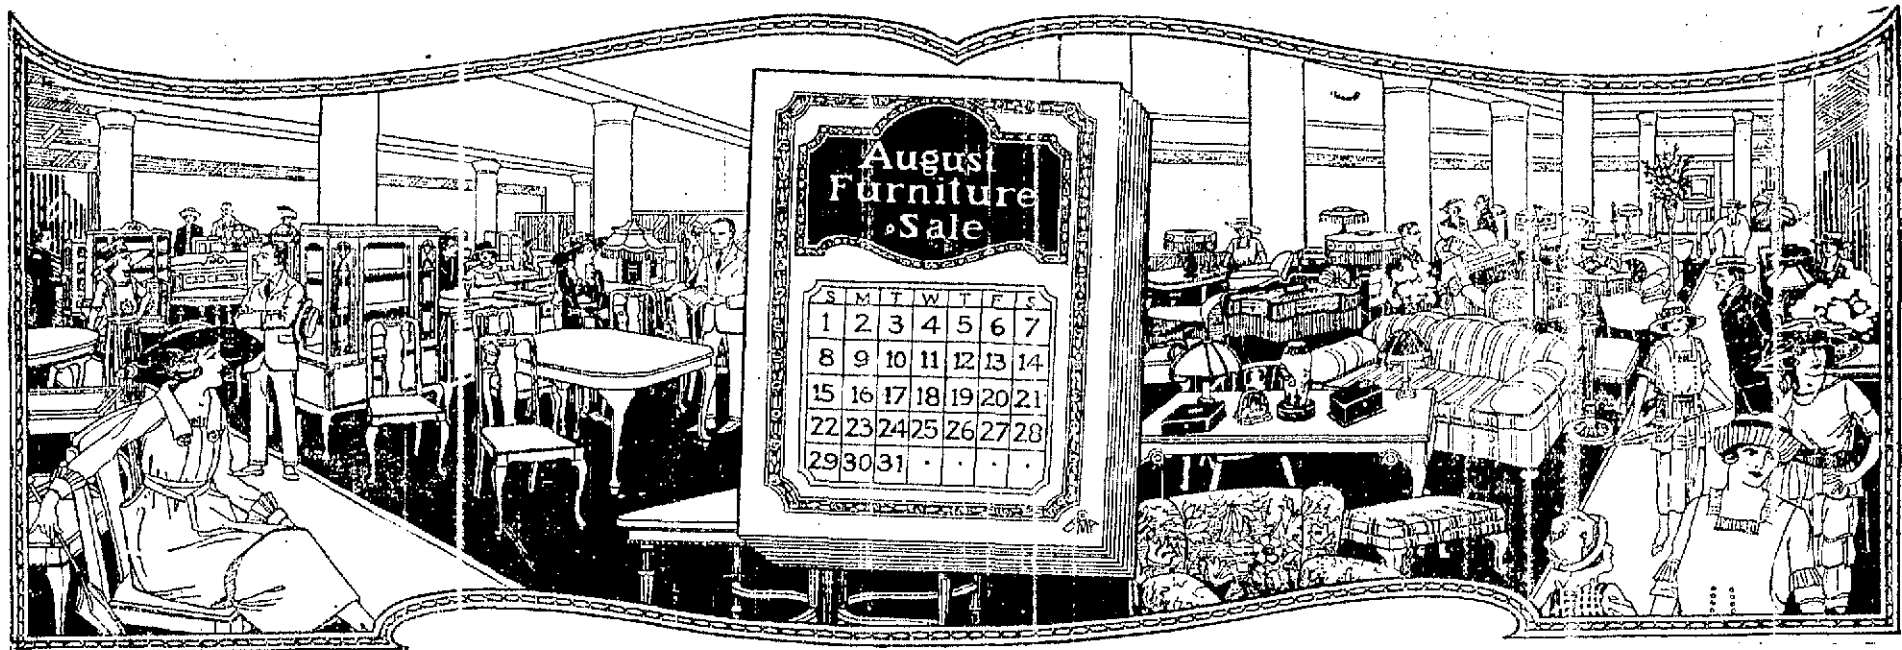

Acknowledgment by Democratic Leader of the United States Senate.

SAYS CONDITIONS ARE BAD

In a Talk to Returned Soldiers He Points Out How the Country is Suffering Under the Present Administration.

Senator Oscar Underwood, Democratic leader of the United States senate, does not seem to be entirely satisfied with the condition of the country under a Democratic administration. His speeches to World war veterans sound like a Republican attack. The senator says: "The government has become the football of the partisan and the desire of the plunderer." And this sweeping declaration is made after seven years of Woodrow Wilson in the White House and seven years of the Democrats in the saddle. Mr. Underwood of Alabama knows what he is talking about. Under the Wilson Democratic regime the southern partisan and southern plunderer with others certainly have fattened upon the government of the United States. Senator Underwood finds that other bad conditions have arisen in the country. He says: "The war profiteer glories in his new wealth, and the high cost of living threatens the humble home," this all has occurred under the peerless idealist, Mr. Wilson, and his Democratic leaders in congress.

In short in his talk to the returned soldiers Senator Underwood hit his party in a non-political speech good and hard. It was frank confession of Democratic failure in the administration of public affairs. And it also was truly Democratic in that he proposed nothing remedial or compensatory to be done by the party so long in power for the lamentable condition in which the soldiers returned and the country for which they fought.

NEWS OF THE DAY AT MT. PLEASANT BRIEFLY RELATED

Supervisor DeLong Solicits Co-Operation of Parents in School Work.

REGULAR ATTENDANCE IS URGED

Attention Called Also to Necessity of Study at Home in Pupils to Make Satisfactory Progress; Fall Term Opens Monday, September 6.

Special to The Courier
MOUNT PLEASANT, Aug. 22.—Prof.
M. L. DeLong, principal of the Mount Pleasant public schools, announced today that they will open for the 1920-21 term on September 6.
A teachers' meeting will be held on Saturday, September 4, at 10 o'clock in the high school building.

All children who will be six years of age on or before January 1, 1921, will be privileged to attend. Children between the ages of eight and 12 years must attend. All children must be vaccinated before they can be enrolled.

Children who were granted vacation or employment certificates and who were employed during the summer, will be obliged to go to school on Sept. 6.

Make-up examinations will be conducted during the afternoon session on September 6 by the teacher in charge of the subjects for the pupils who failed in one or two subjects in the spring examinations.

It is a violation of the child labor law to employ children between eight and 16 years of age when school is in session.

The greatest cause of failure in school work is irregular attendance and too many days out of school, which breed a lack of interest and lack of home study, said Principal DeLong. The young mind cannot concentrate on any subject when surrounded by others who create an interest in the work.

He said the parents of the pupils of age to go to school should be responsible for their children's regular attendance. Teachers must have pupils who are willing to learn with rec-tive minds, before they will be able to instruct. Then there must be collaboration on the subject to be studied before it becomes a part of the lesson.

Friday and Saturday evenings are very appropriate and suitable times for the pupils' social activities. The reminder of the evening not including Sunday can be very profitably employed in their studies and general reading. I am offering the suggestions for the educational benefit of the boys and girls and for the satisfaction of parents and children and teachers.

Would-be Burglar Skipped.

Webster --Man's Man

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of
"Cappy Rick," "The Valley of the Giants," etc.

"I would like to be the least bit surprised Mr. Webster. I found them in your sauce."

"Toll a silence of perhaps half a minute then."
"I'd like to appear inquisitive," Webster began. "But the fact is neighborhood curiosity to know where you got the book. I observe you are reading Samuel Butler's 'Way of All Flesh' and that the book is 'slightly damaged.' Recently I purchased such a book."

"I do not take the trouble to explain the other awkwardly. I discovered this excellent book in your sauce also. In fact, for me that silence has proved to be a repository of treasures."

John Stuart Webster's neck came out of his collar with the suddenness of a turtle coming out of its shell. He himself up beside the top berth until his face was on a level with his un-dressed legs upon whom he bent a look of mingled emotions.

"Who the devil are you?" he demanded.

"I regret I have no card, but even if I had it would be no kindness to inflict upon an American gentleman the cognomen my parents honored me with for I am long and I have joined like a peasant and embodies the names of all the sins in the calendar. Moreover just at present I am traveling under an alias. I am known as Mr. Andrew Bowers."

"And your occupation?" Webster managed to articulate.

"A laudable one, that of prince of monsters. Mr. John S. Webster, the other replied with a mischievous gleam in his dark eyes."

Mr. Webster sat down limply on the settee. He was undecided whether to rise with laughter or shew with rage, while he struggled for a decision. Andrew Bowers blew smoke rings at the ceiling.

"Haven't I seen you before?" Webster queried presently.

"I wouldn't be surprised. I drove you down to the station in a taxi cab an hour ago. You will recall that the taxi driver carried your luggage aboard."

Webster gazed at him and the stereotype here have you hidden your liver? he demanded.

"I wrapped it in a newspaper, then I hung a moustache on the back of my head and stepped forth."

"I beg your pardon, your—pajamas and tucked it overboard."

"But apparently you did not bring along with you a suit of clothes to take the place of your liver?"

"Quite true—temporarily so. Mr.
Webster. Perhaps you will accept my liver as an excuse for being wearing your pajamas. I notice you are another suit of them. Fortunate man!"

Andrew Bowers was a man of persists thirty years, five feet ten inches and apparently in excellent health.
He might have weighed a hundred and seventy pounds and he was undeniably undone.

While Webster was wondering whether his companion was merely a high class tramp or an absconding bank cashier a knock sounded on the stateroom door. He opened it and the pursuer stood in the entrance.

"Ticket, please," he announced.

Webster surrendered both tickets, receiving in turn two seat checks for the dining saloon and the pursuer passed on to the next cabin.

Andrew Bowers smiled a small, president smile, but said nothing and presently John Stuart Webster bit the silence. "Well, he ordered the silence as tell the waiter my ticket."

"I noticed you surrendered my ticket to the pursuer, the young man, and I am glad of that. I take it as prima facie evidence that you have made up your mind to accept my company."

"You're too infernally cool and rock-sure my friend. Webster warned him that if he put himself on a case of but or not I don't care a damn until he's excited for far but he said to time you and don't try to play horse with me. My experience or non-acceptance of you is a subject for future discussion since at present we have some fifty dollars for you. I owe you fifty dollars for your ticket."

Andrew Bowers and in view of the fact that I never saw you before today, suppose we start the voice by squaring the account."

Andrew Bowers sat up in the berth and let his legs dangle over the side.
"Mr. Webster," he began seriously, "if prior to the arrival of the pursuer to collect the tickets you had handed your ticket to me saying, 'Here is your ticket,' Mr. Bowers, I think enough to reimburse me to the extent of fifty dollars." I should have been compelled to admit then, as I do now, that I haven't fifty dollars fortunately for me, however, you surrendered the ticket to the pursuer before acquainting yourself with the state of my affairs. The voice has commended and whether you like it or not my dear sir, I am your guest from now until we reach San Buenaventura. Rather than interesting situation don't you think?"

John Stuart Webster was of Scotch ancestry. He had a hereditary regard for sautees. He was a businessman. Prodigal spender though he was and generous, to a fault the fact remained that he always made it a point to get value received and he was equal with his own money, he preferred the privilege of prodigality.
The Websterian fund should remain an inalienable prerogative of the surviving member of the Webster fam-

"I think you're too cool, young man," Webster retorted. "Just a trifle too cocky. Up to the present moment you have professed no evidence why you should not be adjudged a cad and I do not like cads and must decline to perpetrate one to occupy the same stateroom at my expense. You are clever and amusing and I laughed at you, but at the same time my sense of humor is not so great as to cause me to overlook your impudence and laugh with you. Now, if you have anything to say, say it quickly because you are going to go away from here—in a hurry."

"I plead guilty to the indictment," Mr. Webster and submit as an extensive fact that desperate circumstances require desperate measures. I am not begging my way, neither am I begging for the reason that both forms of travel are repugnant to me. I am merely taking advantage of certain fortuitous circumstances to force you an entire stranger to extend to me a credit of fifty dollars until we reach San Buenaventura, when you will be promptly reimbursed."

"It is not my habit," Webster retorted, "to extend credit to strangers who demand it."

"I do not demand it, sir. I beg it of you, and because I cannot afford to be refused, I took care to arrange matters so that you would not be likely to refuse my request. Really, I do not mean to be cocky and impudent, but before you throw me out I like to let you in on a secret about yourself."

"What?"

"You're not going to throw me out."

"Why not?"

"Because you can't."

"That's fighting talk. Now just to prove to you the depth of error in which you founder, young man, I am about to throw you out." And he grasped Andrew Bowers in the grip of a grizzly bear and whisked him out of the top berth.

"Wait one second, his helpless victim cried. 'I have something to say before you go any farther.'"

"Say it," Webster ordered. "Your last was the only part of you that I cannot control."

"When you throw me out on deck," Andrew Bowers queried, "do your pajamas go with me? Does the taxi cab go with the hide?"

"They cost me sixteen dollars in Salt Lake City, but—good lord, no. I can't throw you on another deck, and if I can't throw you out at all."

"Didn't I tell you so? As a good fellow and from me, look."

"Certainly—for the time being you'll stay tucked in this stateroom while I have a talk with the captain.
He'll probably give you a shirt, a pair of trousers and a strong old shoe for you and set you ashore. I fear you got out of the river. If he doesn't do that, he'll keep you aboard and you'll shiver and suffer for the rest of your journey."

But Mr. Andrew Bowers and the pursuer, who collected my first class ticket."

"What of it? I shall do it—and with results that you are not. Andrew Bowers, that's your name, isn't it? And I did not pay the ticket for you. I dare you to face the captain in my jamas and prove you aren't a scoundrel."

You would win on that point, the baffled guest admitted. But it is a point you will not raise. Why? Because I have already trumped up my alibi. He climbed back into the berth and from that point on, Andrew Bowers' life was a continuous series of trials and tribulations. He was a man
